

Jacqueline Mills

Jacqueline Mills is Head of Advocacy for AFME, the Association for Financial Markets in Europe which represents the leading global and European banks' capital market activities across Europe. The association's members underwrite circa 90% of European debt and 75% European equity issuances and provide secondary market liquidity in these asset classes, together with advice, research, risk management products and post-trading services.

Jacqueline has twenty years' experience working for EU financial services trade associations representing a variety of businesses models and products and dealing with a broad spectrum of financial service policy and regulatory issues.

At AFME, she is responsible for the formulation and delivery of advocacy across the association's policy areas and external stakeholders in the EU and the UK and is a member of AFME's Senior Management Team.

Jacqueline joined AFME in its Prudential Regulation Division in 2014. In 2017, Jacqueline established the association's Frankfurt Office. She was also responsible for developing AFME's relationships with key supervisory authorities, with a particular focus on the ECB SSM and running AFME's SSM Supervisory Committee. Prior to joining AFME, Jacqueline was Head of Asset Finance Policy and Research at Leaseurope, the European Leasing Federation in Brussels. Jacqueline was also an assistant lecturer in Finance at the Université Libre de Bruxelles and has a Masters in Finance and Accounting and a DEA from the Solvay Brussels School of Economics and Management.
