Introduction - The context and status of this ‘Q and A’:

EU legal framework:
On 12th November 2008, the European Commission published a Draft Regulation on Credit Rating Agencies1 (CRAs). The amended version of this Regulation has been approved on 23rd April 2009 by the European Parliament2 and on 27th July 2009 by the European Council3. The European Council signed the Regulation on the 16th September 20094. The Regulation on CRAs was published in the EU Official Journal on 17th November 20095 and came into force on 7th December 2009. It applies by 7th June 2010.

This ‘Q and A’ publication (Ref. CESR/10-521) is intended to provide clarity to market participants with responses in a quick and efficient manner, to questions which are commonly posed to CESR Members. CESR responses do not contain standards, guidelines or recommendations, and therefore no prior consultation process has been followed. It is CESR’s intention to operate in a way that will enable its Members to react quickly and efficiently if any aspect of the common positions published need to be modified or the responses clarified further.

This document will be updated regularly. After each question an indication of the date of its first publication (or latest amendment) will be included to ease the identification of the new Q&A.

CESR Members meet regularly to discuss the questions that have been raised by competent authorities and market participants. Market participants that have identified a question of general importance may send it directly to the relevant competent authority they deal with or to the CESR secretariat (secretariat@cesr.eu). Furthermore, CESR would welcome feedback from market participants on those issues already identified in the document as common positions among its members. The frequency of the future publications will depend on the number of new questions identified and the time it takes to analyze the issues raised and to find common positions.

Q1: Will the small office exemption be granted for supervisory boards?

A1: The Regulation is clear that it is possible to be exempted from the requirements in Annex I A (2) but not Annex I A (1). Whether this exemption is granted is a matter for the home competent authority and the college. If an exemption is to be granted from the requirements of Annex I A (2) the CRA will need to display how it compensates for the lack of independent members of the board at the subsidiary level.

Q2: What will be the approval process, including the timeframe, for the independent members of the supervisory boards as these members will have to be in place before a CRA applies for registration?

A2: Following Articles 15.5 and 16.1 and 2 of the Regulation, the home competent authorities and other members of the college have 25 working days to assess whether the application is complete. Once they have notified to the CRAs that the application is complete, they will have 60 additional working days to examine the application and decide whether to grant or refuse registration. This timeframe equally applies to the assessment of Article 6.2. As regards the assessment of the independent members of the administrative or supervisory board, recital 29 of the Regulation makes clear that the CRAs should ensure that they are independent in a manner consistent with point 13 in Section III of the Commission's Recommendation 2005/162/EC of 15 February 2005. Annex II of this Recommendation spells out the profile of independent non-executive or supervisory directors in more detail. Hence, the independent members who have been put in place should fulfill these requirements.

Q3: Can boards be established with the same participants for each EU subsidiary - could an independent director on one of these boards be treated as independent on another?

A3: The Regulation and the Commission’s Recommendation (2005/162/EC) basically require that independent members have previously not been involved in credit rating activities and that their term of office cannot exceed five years. In case these requirements are fulfilled, CRAs are allowed to appoint the same independent member(s) in the administrative or supervisory board of each EU subsidiary, provided the independent member is able to combine these functions adequately and without any conflict of interest.

Q4: Could an independent member of a CRA's parent company (or any company owning 50% or more of shares) sit as an independent member of the CRA's board?

A4: CRAs are allowed to have the same independent member in the administrative or supervisory board of the CRA's parent company and the CRA itself, if the independent member has previously not been involved in credit rating activities (previous work as a non-executive or supervisory director for the CRA's parent company would be allowed) and provided the independent member is able to combine these functions adequately (i.e. no conflicts of interest; for example, the independent director is conflicted if the compensation from the parent company is indirectly linked (at a consolidated level) to the business performance of the CRA activities).

Q5: Could independent directors have their tenure renewed as long as the total tenure did not exceed the 5 year maximum in the Regulation?

A5: No. The restriction on renewing the tenure of independent directors applies irrespective to the length of the initial tenure. There can be no renewal of tenure.

Q6: If a CRA utilises independent bodies of experts/investors/academics as a non-direct input into their rating approach could members of these bodies be assigned as an independent director of the CRA - provided justification was provided that the previous activity did not compromise their independence?

A6: As regards the assessment of the independent members of the administrative or supervisory board, recital 29 of the Regulation makes clear that the CRA should ensure that they are personally independent in a manner consistent with point 13 in Section III of the Commission’s Recommendation 2005/162/EC of 15 February 2005. Annex II of this Recommendation spells out the profile of independent non-executive or supervisory directors in more detail. These criteria equally apply to members of independent bodies of experts/investors/academics. This means that these members should not be or been previously involved in credit rating activities. In addition, the criteria with regard to the term of office (par. 2 of Section A of Annex I of Regulation) and compensation (par. 6(d) of Section A of Annex I of Regulation) are also applicable.

Q7: With respect to the remuneration of the compliance officer, would it be possible to pay him/her, together with a fixed salary, a bonus as follows: the bonus pool (for all employees) would be determined by the overall performance of the company, and the compliance officer's bonus would be determined solely by qualitative factors with respect to his/her performance (i.e. is he/she doing a good job as compliance officer). Would such a bonus be possible under the Regulation given that (i) it is not in any way awarded on the basis of revenue generation by/facilitated by the compliance officer and (ii) it is based on how well the compliance officer does his/her job as described under the Regulation, which will incentivize the compliance officer to be as diligent as possible.

A7: Paragraph 6(d) of section A of Annex I of the Regulation stipulates that the compensation of the compliance officer is not linked to the business performance of the credit rating agency and is arranged so as to ensure the independence of his or her judgment. These criteria equally apply to the criteria for allowing a bonus for the compliance officer. It should be stressed that the bonus for the compliance officer cannot be linked in any way to the bonus pool which is determined by the overall business performance of the CRA.

Q8: Art. 7.5 of the regulation stipulates that compensation and performance evaluation of rating analysts and persons approving the ratings shall not be contingent on the amount of revenue that the CRA derives from the rated entities or related third parties. This provision seems to be less strict than the similar provisions concerning the compensation of compliance officers (Annex A Section A No. 6 d) or the independent members of the administrative boards (Annex I Section A No. 2) which must be compensated independently of the business performance of the CRA. Does this mean that rating analysts and persons approving the ratings according to Art. 7.5 may receive compensation that is dependent on the overall business performance of the CRA or the performance of the entire group of which the CRA is part?

A8: Such compensation is acceptable as long as the overall business performance of the credit rating agency does not rely to a significant extent on the payments received from a rated entity with which the rating analyst interacts with directly on an ongoing basis or in a way that will have a material impact on the independence and quality of the rating process It is essential that the credit rating agency ensures that by granting a bonus no conflicts of interest may arise as described in Art 6.1 and Annex I Section B point 1. Based on this and with respect to individual circumstances in different companies it seems to be appropriate that the decision could be made on a case-by-case basis. Annex II point 13 stipulates the requirement for a CRA to submit information on compensation and performance evaluation policies and procedures, as well as statistics on remuneration of employees involved in the rating business.

Q9: The independent members will have to provide opinions to the Supervisory Board on certain matters. What is CESR’s view on the nature of these opinions?

A9: Opinions of the independent board members must reflect the elements set out in Annex I, Section A point 2 of the Regulation.
Such opinions shall be presented to the board periodically and be made available to the competent authority on request. Independent board members should ensure the sound and prudent management of the credit rating agency as well as the independence or accuracy of the credit rating activities. These opinions should be based on a thorough and risk-based analysis performed by such members rather than a formulistic or bureaucratic process. These opinions should lead to appropriate follow-up and subsequent consideration by the board as necessary.

Q10: If exemptions are granted must there be independent board members to represent exempted offices in a group board?

A10: The Regulation is clear that it is not possible to be exempted from the requirements in Annex I A (1) (i.e. supervisory board for a CRA). If a CRA which receives an exemption has a group board, independent board members would have responsibility for representing all subsidiaries covered by the board, exempted or not. However, independent board members specifically representing the exempted subsidiaries will not be required.

Q11: What is expected of the CRA if it has outsourcing arrangements?

A11: If CRA is relying on outsourcing arrangements, there should be an outsourcing policy covering, as a minimum:

a. The checks that the CRA would conduct when assessing the viability of utilising an outsourcing arrangement for a certain aspect of their business – this should include a consideration of whether using an outsourcing arrangement would breach Article 9 or any other Article of the Regulation; an evaluation of the risks presented to the quality, integrity and continuity of ratings; the controls that would need to be put in place; and the level at which this would need to be signed-off.

b. The checks that the CRA would perform with regard to potential outsourcing partners to ensure that they would handle any sensitive data appropriately; are able to perform the role required without putting the quality, integrity and continuity of ratings at risk; and the level at which the final sign-off for the arrangement would need to be made at.

c. The monitoring that the CRA would conduct to ensure that outsourcing arrangements remained appropriate.

If a CRA does not rely on any outsourcing requirements, there does not have to be any outsourcing policy.

Q12: To what extent can a CRA rely on reviews of methodologies conducted by internal review functions of other members of its group? Does this alter if the other member of the group is in a non-EU jurisdiction (but subject to equivalent or as stringent regulatory requirements)?

A12: CESR recognises that many of the methodologies and models utilised by a CRA group are determined on a global basis and in some cases the review of these methodologies is conducted in locations outside of the EU. The Regulation indicates that each CRA must have an independent review function to assess the methodologies and models used in ratings produced in that particular CRA. However, a key aspect of the usefulness of ratings to market participants is the consistency in approach to assessment of credit risk that this provides.

With respect to methodologies reviewed within the EU, in the circumstances that the review of rating methodologies takes place in another CRA within the EU group, CESR considers that these have undergone the review required under the Regulation and, if this is subject to appropriate outsourcing arrangements then this could be considered appropriate. The Regulation seeks to create a robust and consistent regime for CRA oversight within the EU which involves colleges of competent authorities – all of which will be able to access information on and assess the appropriateness of the review function.
The review of methodologies may be conducted in an endorsable office of a global group, subject to appropriate outsourcing arrangements, without the need for specific review at the EU level.

Q13: If a CRA has material concerns over the handling of advanced rating information by the issuer can it ignore the requirement to provide 12 hours notice of rating action? If not should they take any additional action?

A13: The requirement in Annex I D (3) means that a CRA must alert the rated entity at least 12 hours before publication that a rating will be published, the confidential nature of this information and the principle grounds on which the rating is based. This is not a requirement that can be ignored irrespective of a CRA’s concerns over the treatment of this information.

We understand that this disclosure may cause concerns over potential market abuse. In the event that the CRA has concerns over the treatment of the information they have been required to provide the entity in question, they should indicate their concerns to the appropriate competent authority, who will if necessary take action against the entity. Providing information to an entity due to this regulatory requirement would not mean that the CRA is breaching market abuse rules.

Endorsement regime February 2010

Q14: Can an EU CRA endorse non-EU ratings even if it is not registered in time to meet the timetable in the Regulation (Article 41)? Will endorsed ratings be treated the same as EU ratings in terms of regulatory use if registration process is still on-going beyond 7 December 2010?

A14: Yes. Ratings from third countries that a CRA intends to endorse (as disclosed in its application) will be allowed to be used for regulatory purposes until the registration decision with regard to the endorsing CRA is made. If the endorsement of these ratings is not allowed under the registration decision they will not be able to be endorsed following the registration approval.

Q15: Will a non-EU branch of an EU CRA be deemed to issue EU ratings?

A15: As branches are not legal entities when a non-EU branch of an EU CRA produces ratings these will be considered to have been issued by the EU CRA and these ratings will be captured by the EU Regulation and oversight by EU supervisors. Therefore for the purposes of Article 4.1 they would be treated as ratings produced by a registered CRA.

Q16: What would CESR consider an objective reason for a rating to be elaborated in a non-EU country for the purposes of the endorsement regime?

A16: The central principle of this requirement is that rating activity should not be moved outside the EU as a means of circumventing the EU requirements. It is for the CRA to provide the objective reason and for the competent authorities to assess this.

As an example it is unlikely that it would be acceptable that the rating activity relating to an issuer or security that had traditionally been carried out by analysts based in the EU could be moved without an objective reason.

Non-exhaustive examples of potential objective reasons for elaborating ratings in a third country could be: 1) the CRA has only recently opened an EU office and the staff that have the experience rating the EU entities that they cover are based outside the EU – immediately transferring the rating of these entities to the new EU office may lead to a decline in the quality of the rating. 2) corporate action (for example a takeover/merger) means the rating activity does not reflect new corporate structures.
Q17: Will CESR members take different decisions in relation to the granting of small office exemptions to take account of national factors (e.g. a small office in one jurisdiction of less than 20 employees)?

A17: The criteria for exemptions in the Regulation are clear and should not be supplemented by national requirements. Although this is a matter for the home competent authority to make a final decision on applications for an exemption will be assessed against the criteria in the Regulation and not against nationally developed criteria. The college should ensure that exemptions are granted consistently across the CRA group.

Q18: Will CESR members grant a small office exemption in relation to the compliance function so that the office can be covered by compliance officers based in central locations?

A18: The compliance requirements must be carried out at a subsidiary level, rather than group level, unless an exemption is granted. If an exemption is to be granted from the compliance officer requirements of Annex I the CRA will need to display how it appropriately manages the absence of this control - one way could be to ensure that a group level function covers the office for these purposes. The criteria for exemptions in the Regulation are clear and should not be supplemented by national requirements. Although this is a matter for the home competent authority to make a final decision on applications for an exemption will be assessed against the criteria in the Regulation. It is important to note that in the event that the exemption is granted for compliance purposes if a group function is used to meet the requirements under Article 6.3 (b) a CRA will need to demonstrate there is appropriate coverage in each office – this may require local staff depending on the size and business conducted in the office. Where staff have a compliance role in an office it should not be combined with another role that may present a conflict with this activity.

Q19: How will CESR handle the registration process if a request for a small office exemption is refused? Will the timetable for registration be extended? Will a waiver be granted to allow registration to proceed with a timetable established for the CRA to implement the necessary requirements for which an exemption has been refused?

A19: Guidance on the registration process will be published by CESR in due course. The Regulation provides clear timelines in which the registration must be decided. Article 15.5 allows the college 25 days to assess the completeness of the application and grant the CRA more time to provide missing information. If competent authorities agree that the exemption cannot be granted in this period it will be possible for them to provide the CRA more time to provide information on the establishment of the required functions, processes and procedures to meet the Regulation. If the time allotted in Article 15.5 has expired there is no further possibility for providing a CRA additional time to meet requirements for registration outside of those set out in Articles 16 and 17. Given the complexity of responding to such a rejection it is appropriate for the college to give the CRA a sufficient period within the registration process to respond to the exemption refusal before making the final registration decision, provided this is granted under Article 15.5.

It should be noted that Article 16.2 also allows for an extension of 30 days if the CRA requests exemption from compliance in accordance with Article 6.3.

Q20: Will CESR members grant a small office exemption for analyst rotation?

A20: If an exemption is to be granted from the rotation requirements of Annex I C (8) a CRA will need to display how it appropriately manages the risk of analyst exposure. The criteria for exemptions in the Regulation are clear and should not be supplemented by national requirements. Although this is a matter for the home competent authority to make a final decision on applications for an exemption will be assessed against the criteria in the Regulation.

Q21: How will the exemption criteria be assessed? What information will a CRA need to supply to facilitate gaining exemptions (i.e. on the appropriateness of staffing levels, the ability of the group to appropriately cover the supervisory board requirement with a group board)?

A21: CRAs intending to apply for exemption as per article 6.3 should submit in their application for registration the necessary information demonstrating that all the requirements set out in that specific article are satisfied. Exemptions will be assessed and granted on a case-by-case basis by the college. Competent authorities will be giving special attention to the measures and procedures implemented to ensure the effective compliance with the objectives of this Regulation, in particular the internal control mechanisms, reporting arrangements and measures ensuring independence of rating analysts and persons approving credit ratings that they intend to utilize to compensate for the exemption. The number of employees being less than 50 will not suffice on its own to be granted the exemption, all elements of article 6.3 will be evaluated.

Disclosures

February 2010 - May 2010

Q22: Do you agree with us reporting the revenue information called for in Annex I, Section E, Sub-section II, by identifying the "client" as either the arranger, originator/sponsor or collateral manager, depending upon which one has, in our assessment, the greatest economic benefit from the transaction?

A22: For non-structured finance ratings we consider the Regulation to provide the definition of client and we take the question refers to defining client for the purpose of disclosures required under Annex I E II with respect to structured finance ratings. For structured finance it is appropriate to monitor the related third parties to the transaction (as defined in Article 3 of the Regulation) and consider them as clients and reflect this in disclosures on revenues.

Q23: Do you agree that the reporting of the list of clients "whose contribution to the growth rate in the generation of revenue of the credit rating agency in the previous financial year exceeded the growth rate in the total revenues of the credit rating agency in that year by a factor of more than 1.5 times" only applies in years where the global revenue of the credit rating agency has increased?

A23: In years where there is no overall growth in a CRA’s revenue Annex I E 2(b) will require the CRA to disclose any entity from which the CRA increased its revenue generation and that made up greater than 0.25% of the global revenue.

Q24: Could the transparency report be prepared at group level or EU-wide level?

A24: Yes, a transparency report could be produced at group or EU-wide level. However, Article 12 of the Regulation requires a transparency report from each credit rating agency which implies that a transparency report produced at group or EU-wide level would therefore have to include the information of each credit rating agency in a format that allowed it to be identified as coming separately from each particular CRA. Disclosures expected of a CRA under the Regulation will need to be provided at a CRA subsidiary level.

Q25: Can endorsed ratings be identified in the text of the rating report? Can it be confirmed whether a separate identifier is necessary?
A25: It is necessary that an endorsed rating is identified as such in order to satisfy the requirements set out in Articles 4.2, 10.2 and Annex I, section D of the Regulation. Such identification does not necessarily require a separate “identifier”; an appropriate disclosure could also be made in ratings publications.

Q26: Does revenue disclosure need to be made at a global or subsidiary level?

A26: CRAs are expected to provide information on revenues at a subsidiary level, and where applicable at a branch level.

Q27: Will CESR provide a system of pre-approval for certain issues ahead of the formal application (e.g. exemptions, governance, analyst rotation)?

A27: No. CESR and its members will not be able to grant any form of official pre-approval. The established pre-application colleges will be able to make informal comments on the appropriateness of a CRA's proposals.

Q28: Article 40 requires a CRA to be in compliance with the Regulation at the time of application. Will CESR permit any extended time for a particular requirement where a CRA is not yet fully in compliance despite its best endeavours?

A28: The Regulation is clear that a CRA already operating in the EU should be fully compliant with the Regulation not at the time of application but by 7 September 2010. The college will need to determine whether the lack of compliance will impact on the ability of the CRA to be registered - under the timescales for registration set out in the Regulation (i.e. the CRA will need to be fully compliant before college members will unanimously agree to the registration being granted) - however there are no Articles in the Regulation that would lead to an automatic refusal of registration for this.

Q29: In which way can a CRA meet the requirements of Art. 10.3 of the Regulation (on the indicator for structured finance)?

A29: Article 10 of the Regulation states that ratings of structured finance products should be “clearly differentiated using an additional symbol which distinguishes them from rating categories used for any other entities, financial instruments or financial obligations.”

Definition of ‘structured finance’: Art. 3.1 (l) of the Regulation states: “‘structured finance instrument’ means a financial instrument or other assets resulting from a securitisation transaction or scheme referred to in Article 4(36) of Directive 2006/48/EC (pursuit of business of credit institutions).” Article 4(36) of Directive 2006/48/EC states: “‘securitisation’ means a transaction or scheme, whereby the credit risk associated with an exposure or pool of exposures is tranched, having the following characteristics:
(a) payments in the transaction or scheme are dependent upon the performance of the exposure or pool of exposures; and
(b) the subordination of tranches determines the distribution of losses during the ongoing life of the transaction or scheme;”

There may be more than one way of meeting the above requirements and so it will be for the CRA to ensure they are met. As an example the addition of an indicator which clearly differentiates the rating from other types of credit ratings behind the original rating would be in line with Article 10.3 of the Regulation on the condition that the proper written procedures and policies governing the classification between the structured finance rating scale and the original rating scale are in place and that CRAs also meet other requirements of the Regulation in the field of structured finance.

Q30: Will CESR provide a list of structured finance instruments for the purposes of Article 3 (l) of the Regulation?

A30: The definition of structured finance product is given by the Regulation as below:

Art. 3.1 (l) of the Regulation states: “structured finance instrument’ means a financial instrument or other assets resulting from a securitization transaction or scheme referred to in Article 4(36) of Directive 2006/48/EC (pursuit of business of credit institutions)”. The article refers to the following definition in Article 4(36) of Directive 2006/48/EC:

“‘securitisation’ means a transaction or scheme, whereby the credit risk associated with an exposure or pool of exposures is tranched, having the following characteristics:

(a) payments in the transaction or scheme are dependent upon the performance of the exposure or pool of exposures; and
(b) the subordination of tranches determines the distribution of losses during the ongoing life of the transaction or scheme;“

In determining whether a rating is structured finance or not, CESR will use the same definitions of structured finance and securitization as stated above and will not be providing any further definition. CESR does not intend to provide a list of structured finance instruments.

Q31: Can CESR provide a schedule of the fees to be charged for registration and on-going supervision?

A31: This is a matter for each home competent authority to consider. CRAs should contact their home competent authorities to gain clarity on this issue.

Q32: If yes, would CESR post on its website drafts of the national implementing measures to allow for greater transparency in this process?

A32: No. CESR will not be doing this.

Q33: Are non-qualitative ratings captured as credit ratings for the purposes of the Regulation?

A33: Paragraph 12 of the draft CESR guidance (Consultation Paper CESR/09-955) stipulates that “Articles 14 to 20 of the Regulation provide for the process of registration for legal persons established in the Community whose occupation includes the issuing of credit ratings on a professional basis. The term credit rating is defined in Article 3.1 (a) as follows: “credit rating’ means an opinion regarding the creditworthiness of an entity, a debt, or financial obligation, debt security, preferred share or other financial instrument, or of an issuer of such a debt or financial obligation, debt, preferred share or other financial instrument, issued using an established and defined ranking system of rating categories”. The expression of such opinions requires according to the Regulation also the performance of rating specific analytical functions by a person (“rating analysts”). Summarizing and expressing data according to a pre-set statistical system or model alone without any additional substantial rating specific analytical input from a rating analyst in the assessment process, which CESR considers to be the definition of non-qualitative ratings, does therefore, like the activities listed in the exceptions in Article 2.2 of the Regulation (e.g. private credit ratings, credit scores and others), not require a registration according to the Regulation”. Hence, non-qualitative ratings do not count as credit ratings for the purposes of the Regulation, but firms should be able to prove that a rating indeed falls under the aforementioned definition.

Q34: Do financial strength ratings count as credit ratings for the purposes of the Regulation?

A34: When assessing whether specific types of ratings, such as financial strength ratings, are counted as credit ratings firms will need to examine the exact nature of the ratings in question and compare this to the definition of a credit rating, as it is stated in the Regulation. However, CESR, having reviewed a number of market definitions of financial strength ratings considers them to appear to fall under the definition of credit ratings, as stated in the Regulation:

Under the Regulation the definition of credit rating (Art 3.1 (a)) is:

“credit rating’ means an opinion regarding the creditworthiness of an entity, a debt or financial obligation, debt security, preferred share or other financial instrument, or of an issuer of such a debt or financial obligation, debt security, preferred share or other financial instrument, issued using an established and defined ranking system of rating categories”. Any ratings that fall under this definition will be considered credit ratings and a firm producing them in the EU will require registration unless they meet the exemptions under Article 2 of the Regulation.

Q35: Could CESR provide clarification of the CRA’s approach to "ancillary services"/non credit rating business?

A35: In the Regulation there is a list of ancillary services provided under Annex I B (4). CESR recognises that a CRA may provide other non-rating services that could potentially create a conflict of interest. In the event that a CRA performs non-rating activity that is not captured by the scope of ancillary services set out in the Regulation it is expected that this will be indicated and appropriately managed in a way that satisfies Annex I B (1).

Q36: Permissible sharing of confidential information: point 3(c) of Section C of Annex I of the Regulation states that CRAs should ensure that certain specified persons “do not share confidential information entrusted to the credit rating agency with rating analysts and employees of any person directly or indirectly linked to it by control as well as with any other natural persons whose services are placed at the disposal or under the control of any person directly or indirectly linked to it by control and who is not directly involved in the credit rating activities”. In addition, point 3(d) of Section C of Annex I states, in part, that CRAs should ensure that those specified persons do not use confidential information “for any other purpose except the conduct of the credit rating activities”. How is CESR interpreting this and is the provision intended to prohibit the sharing of confidential information beyond individual rating teams?

A36: The persons referred to in point 1 of Section C of Annex I of the Regulation are allowed to share the confidential information in the normal exercise of their credit rating activities. Finally, the provision intends to prohibit the exchange of confidential information even between individual rating teams unless this is strictly necessary for the elaboration of a specific rating. CRAs will be required to have policies and procedures in place to identify recipients of confidential information for each rating issued.
Q37: Involvement in credit rating activities: a number of provisions in the Regulation apply, in part, to individuals “who are directly involved in credit rating activities”. Could CESR clarify this term and in particular whether it is intended to include support and other staff that assist in preparing presentations for rating committees or entering information on a rating into internal systems prior to publication, whether or not those individuals have decision-making functions?

A37: CESR considers the key aim of these elements of the Regulation is to create the appropriate level of independence and mitigate the risk of conflicts of interest. Therefore support staff would not be captured as long as they were not making rating decisions and are not in contact with the issuer. The focus of the Regulation is on those that influence the determination of the rating and have a relationship with the issuer and related parties. Therefore the examples cited would not be captured by the term ‘who are directly involved in credit rating activities’ as long as they met the above principles.

Q38: Scope of disclosure of, or prohibition on, issuing ratings when financial interest exists: point 3(a) of Section B of Annex I of the Regulation states that CRAs cannot issue a rating or must immediately disclose that a rating is potentially impacted when the CRA or a specified individual “directly or indirectly owns financial instruments of the rated entity or any related third party or has any other direct or indirect ownership interest in that entity or party other than holdings in diversified collective investment schemes or managed funds including pension funds and life insurance”. For the purpose of this provision the specified individuals include “rating analysts employees as well as any other natural persons whose services are placed at the disposal or under the control of the credit rating agency and who are directly involved in the issuance of credit rating and persons approving credit ratings”. Could CESR provide guidance on the interpretation of this provision and in particular whether it prohibits any individual specified in the Regulation from trading or owning securities of any rated entity or related third party, even if that individual is not involved in rating the specific entity?

A38: The Regulation indeed prohibits any individual who is directly involved in credit rating activities to buy or sell or engage in any transaction in any financial instrument issued, guaranteed, or otherwise supported by any rated entity within the individual’s area of primary analytical responsibility. If applicable, Annex I, section B paragraph 3 should be followed.

If the individual in any way becomes the owner of any financial instrument rated by the CRA which is in their area of primary analytical responsibility expertise or for which they have confidential information, they could:
- cease to participate or in any way influence the determination of related credit rating(s);
- place the securities into some form of trust or investment scheme over which they have no influence and cannot have any right to access information about the investment decisions of the trust or investment scheme; or
- immediately divest their holding of the instruments concerned.

Q39: Personnel covered by analyst rotation: article 6(4) of the Regulation states that CRAs should “establish an appropriate gradual rotation mechanism with regard to the rating analysts and persons approving credit ratings as defined in Section C of Annex I”. However, point 1 of Section C of Annex I and many of the requirements in Section C of Annex I apply to “rating analysts and employees of the credit rating agency as well as any other natural persons whose services are placed at the disposal or under the control of the credit rating agency and who are directly involved in credit rating activities, as well as persons closely associated with them”, “closely associated” being defined in separate EU legislation. Could CESR clarify whether Article 6(4) requires rotation of “rating analysts and persons approving credit ratings” or more broadly requires rotation of all personnel “who are directly involved in credit rating activities”?
A39: Whereas other Articles refer to “persons who are directly involved in rating activities” Article 7.4 and Annex I C 8 do not. We do not consider this accidental and therefore the rotation requirements only apply to analysts and persons approving credit ratings. We consider the list of persons to which the rotation requirements in Annex I C.8 apply to be exhaustive.

Q40: Who does CESR define as the person approving the rating?

A40: Persons approving credit ratings are individuals who provide the formal sign-off of credit ratings for publication, and all other related authorizing actions taken after the elaboration of the rating, prior to the publication of the rating. They may be a committee Chair/member and/or senior management of a CRA or another other individual carrying out such function. CESR does not intend to dictate how CRAs should operate in this respect and will therefore consider any proposal put forward by CRAs as part of their application for registration.

Q41: Should there be fixed policies dictating the selection of rating committee members?

A41: The process for selecting rating committee members should not present a risk of conflicts of interest that is not managed. Therefore, CRAs should have appropriate policies for managing this risk.

Q42: What will be the scope of related third parties in relation to the rotation of structured finance staff?

A42: CESR considers the rotation mechanism is put in place to maintain the independence of the rating analyst and other analytical staff (including surveillance) involved in the rating process. Any party that the personnel mentioned above interacts with directly on an ongoing basis or in a way that will have a material impact on the independence and quality of the rating process will be included in the scope of the related third parties.

Q43: Do the requirements on treatment of confidential information apply to information for which the CRA has received consent to share? Does this consent need to be granted specifically or can it be on the basis of a public statement of policy?

A43: If there is consent, information may be shared. If the CRA has a public statement of policy regarding its handling of confidential data that indicates that the CRA will share the information with specific entities as part of their rating activities this means that they can share any information provided to them by clients with these entities, provided the applicable data protection laws are adhered to. This public statement would however need to be referenced appropriately within the contractual agreement between the CRA and these entities.

Q44: Can CRAs charge for information they are required to disclose under Annex I D as there does not currently appear to be anything preventing this?

A44: CRAs are required to disclose this information and therefore not restrict access to it. Information required to be made public by the Regulation should not be charged for (Article 13).

Q45: Meaning of provision relating to document retention on premises: the Regulation requires that each CRA retain the books and records specified under the Regulation “at the premises of the registered credit rating agency for at least five years”. Could CESR confirm that electronic imaging and storage of these documents off-site - that is accessible on-site - complies with this provision of the Regulation?

A45: This can comply with the Regulation. Storage facilities are often located off-site, but accessibility is a key condition for this to be acceptable for document retention purposes. Responsibility for the safety and integrity of the data must of course remain at CRA level.

Q46: Meaning and scope of unsolicited rating: the Regulation requires that CRAs disclose specified information with respect to each unsolicited rating but do not define the meaning of “unsolicited”. The information that CRAs are required to disclose includes “whether or not the rated entity or related third party participated in the credit rating process and whether the credit rating agency had access to the accounts and other relevant internal documents of the rated entity or its related third party”. Could CESR clarify the interpretation of “unsolicited” for the purposes of the Regulation?

A46: Recital 21 describes an unsolicited rating as a rating “not initiated at the request of the issuer or rated entity”, which already rules out many ratings, but there will probably be grey areas where more explanation is needed. In line with earlier statements, further work is needed at CESR level to safeguard a consistent approach across colleges, and leave the specific questions to the colleges.

Q47: Will requirements such as rotation, independent board members remaining term and SF indicators be applied retrospectively or prospectively from the date of registration/application?

A47: With respect to rating indicators, article 10.3 of the Regulation stipulates that all rating categories attributed to structured finance instruments are clearly differentiated using an additional symbol. Therefore, this requirement should apply to all outstanding ratings.

With respect to analyst rotation, the requirements set out in article 7.4 and Annex I section C(8) of the Regulation will not be expected to be assigned retrospectively. CRAs shall adopt all necessary measures to comply with such provisions by 7 September 2010 or the date of registration, if this is earlier.

With respect to independent members the maximum number of years for which they can remain in their role in the board is five years, starting from the 7th of September 2010 or the date of their registration, if this is earlier. The maximum term requirements will not be expected to be met retrospectively.

Q48: If a rating has been reviewed since the last ‘annual’ review does it need to be reviewed within a year of the last ‘annual’ review or the latest review?

A48: A rating should be reviewed at a minimum once every 12 months. This period is re-set each time the rating is reviewed.
